THE PRECURSOR OF ART

The World Institute for Learning (WIL) was established by the Royal Society in the year of the foundation of the University of London in 1827. It was the first of its kind in the world, and it was the first of its kind in the world.

WIL was the first of its kind in the world, and it was the first of its kind in the world.

"Some critics believed the Arts Council and the Arts Council were taking an experiment that could not succeed, and the new school would become a part of the Birmingham University. There was no provision for such an institution anywhere in the world."
